Mrs. Catherine Lee
January 15, 1913 – August 25, 2001

Teaching at a new school must have been hectic, and not a little unnerving. There were students racing around the campus with piles of books because the lockers didn't arrive on time. It was always muddy and flooded on rainy days, because there was no grass or proper drainage. It would be my guess that Mrs. Lee was better prepared than most to shepherd students through the school day beginning with "A" Period and finishing with football practice on a campus that was largely dirt and noise when she arrived.

Mrs. Lee taught school for 30 years. She first taught at Southern California Military Academy (for three years), then at Tustin Union High School (for ten years) and lastly and fortunately for hundreds of us, seventeen years at El Modena High School.

Educated at Boston University, her teaching style and personal bearing demanded respect. Her business-like approach to teaching was mirrored in her navy blue suits, sensible pumps and never-a-hair-out-of-place style.

Hired to teach British Literature, Mrs. Lee taught us much more than Shakespeare and Donne. She taught us to respect the writing process. She taught us to value well written work. She also taught us to think for ourselves, providing daily opportunities to test our abilities. Her expectations of proper behavior and attention to detail helped to craft skilled writers, voracious readers and students who knew how to treat others with regard.

It is with sadness that we said good-bye to Mrs. Lee. We do, however, celebrate her life by remembering and sharing the gifts she shared with us, and by following the dreams she helped build.
